

KERN NOTIFIED

Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Makes Vigorous

SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

Mr. Bryan Also Talks—"Shall the People Rule?"—Federal License System Advocated.

At Indianapolis, Ind., on Tuesday, John Worth Kern, Democratic candidate for Vice President, was formally notified of his nomination by the Democratic National Convention at Denver. He delivered his acceptance speech to 15,000 people in the coliseum at the state fair grounds.

The notification speech was made by Theodore E. Bell of California, chairman of the committee selected at Denver to inform Mr. Kern officially. W. J. Bryan spoke at length on the subject of trusts.

The meeting was called to order by Thomas Taggart, member of the National Committee from Indiana, who relinquished the gavel to Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, N. Y., chairman of the National Committee. Mr. Mack presided throughout the meeting.

Preceding the notification exercises Mr. Bryan, Mr. Kern, Chairman Mack and members of the National, Congressional and Notification Committees held conferences at the Denison Hotel, where luncheon was served, and the entire party was driven through the principal business streets of the city to the fair grounds. Following the meeting Mr. and Mrs. Kern entertained Mr. Bryan and the visiting Democratic leaders at dinner.

Mr. Kern's speech was divided between the tariff and a reply to the assertion of his rival, James S. Sherman, that the issue was not "Shall the people rule?" Mr. Kern cited as proof that popular rule is shackled in the Federal Government, the suppression of reform legislation by Speaker Cannon. He quoted both the Speaker and his secretary in confession of the smothering of such measures, by means of packed House committees.

There was, Mr. Kern pointed out, a reactionary power in the Republican party which would shape the fulfillment of its pledges. It defeated the reforms asked by the President, and then ironically praised his administration, wrote the platform and nominated the candidates. This power, he showed, was not in touch with the new era of conscience, and that to gain tariff reform, the voters would have to rely on the Democratic party. The position of that party was not to war on capital but to draw a sharp line between lawful business lawfully conducted, and unlawful business. The references to Speaker Cannon's Czarlike rule was the hit of the speech, and Mr. Kern was wildly cheered through them.

Mr. Bryan, in his speech concluding the exercises, appealed for judgment against the Republican party by reason of its failure to enforce the law against trusts during its long lease of power with the Sherman law always available. He pointed out that both in colorless platform pledge and by pledge of its candidates, it promises no greater relief to the people. Mr. Taft, he declared, had caught none of Roosevelt's splendid fire.

The Democratic platform, on the other hand, he declared, was explicit in stating what might be expected if it were placed in authority. It would, he declared, vigorously enforce the criminal law against trusts and, in addition, pass a law which would make private monopoly impossible in the United States. He meant by this the Federal license plan.

Furthermore, Mr. Bryan cited the case of Chairman duPont, of the Republican Speakers' Bureau, as one example of the fact that the trust chiefs are running the Republican party.

Mr. Bryan went into a considerable analysis of the Federal license plan. By compelling all corporations controlling 25 per cent. of a commodity to take out a license for interstate business and limiting their control to 50 per cent., not business, but monopoly.

Winning Races

Bedford's pacer, "Hot Stuff," belonging to Liveryman R. A. Stiver now taking in the fairs, has had a winning streak, though not capturing first money. He won second money at Butler this week, making the three heats in 2:19½, 2:17½ and 2:19½. He won third money at Kittanning last week, and also third money at Newport and Carlisle earlier in the season.

HARRY STEVENS SHOT

Wound in Neck Not Considered Serious—Playing With Firearms.

Harry Stevens was accidentally shot in the throat Wednesday evening by George Cessna in the office of the latter's father with a 32-calibre revolver. Although the wound is not considered serious, the ball still remains in the neck and may cause future trouble.

Harry Stevens, a student in the P. R. R. School for Telegraphers, was to return to his home near Sunbury yesterday and was to spend the preceding night with George Cessna, son of Harry Cessna, with whom he had become quite chummy. Stevens, Cessna, Henderson Points and Charles Lutz, all friends and chums, were in the office at the time of the accident. Lutz and Points are said to have been reading while the other boys were engaged in some Wild West performances. Stevens had a gun and Cessna a pistol, both of which were supposed not to be loaded. They snapped their weapons at each other several times without any explosion, but Cessna's pistol contained a loaded chamber, the cartridge in which finally exploded, passed along the gun barrel held by Stevens, injuring his left thumb and striking him in the front of the neck. The ball glanced, doing little damage, and is supposed to have taken a backward and downward course, its location being unknown.

The injured boy was taken to the office of Dr. W. C. Miller where the ball was probed for without effect. Stevens is able to be around and is receiving all necessary attention at the Cessna home.

SCHILLSBURG CELEBRATION

Centennial Anniversary of Laying Out of Town to Be Observed.

Arrangements have been completed for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the laying-out of Schillsburg by John Schell in 1808. The celebration proper will occupy Thursday, September 3, but on the following day a union picnic will be held in a grove near town.

It is expected that a larger crowd will occupy the historic town than has for years gathered within her borders and elaborate arrangements are being made to entertain them.

Many of the sons and daughters of the town who have long been absent are expected to return for the occasion to renew old acquaintances and have a general good time. Make the most of the occasion. Let every house and business place be decorated. The program will prove interesting from early morning until the putting off of the fireworks closes the day's exercises.

Rainsburg Water Pure

The fever epidemic at Rainsburg has slightly abated. One new case, that of David Stuckey, has been reported within the past week and Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Reighard and Mrs. Edward Stuckey are still very ill. Of the other six cases S. G. Pennell, the first victim, is now able to be up, and Ralph, Chester and Miss Reta Cessna, Elmer and Miss Blanche Smith are improving.

Medical Inspector Dr. Walter M. Hill of Everett sent samples of water from the borough reservoir to the State Department at Harrisburg and on Friday received a message stating that the water was found to be pure. The cause of the epidemic cannot be learned.

THE COUNTY FAIR

Preparations Being Made for Fine Exhibit This Fall.

The fair ground is the scene of activity these days. The new grandstand is under way and will be completed in about two weeks. It will be a substantial structure with a seating capacity of about 500. It is located where the old one was and can be enlarged if it becomes necessary. It is being well built under the direction of Jacob Drenning and will add greatly to the grounds.

A new judge's stand will be built and the present one will be moved around the track and used by the starter.

The track is being repaired and shortly before the fair will be rolled and put in first class shape for the races. The stables have been repaired and there are now quarters for seventeen race horses. More can be taken care of, if necessary. The old exhibition building and other sheds have been torn down, and the fence around the track repaired.

The grounds will be in much better shape than former years, and it is the intention of the present board of directors, if continued in office, to keep on with the improvements next year until the grounds are in first class shape.

Several attractions have been secured for the fair this fall, and the directors are negotiating for more. The racing program is a good one and there will be plenty of amusements for all.

The premium list will be ready for distribution in about a week and those wishing to make exhibits can see what the premiums will be. Many inquiries have been received in regard to exhibits and the prospects are good for an excellent display.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Sees Plymouth Rock and other Historic Places and Objects.

Canobie Lake, N. H.

This is one of the most beautiful spots that I know of, away off in the pine forests of New Hampshire. The lake has three hundred and eighty-five acres in it and the park grounds have another hundred; the lake is crowded with black bass and pickerel. This is the home of David Bowser and here Dave and his good wife Maggie reign over the amusements and the Pittsburgh cottage or Bedford Cottage, I forget which. Mr. Bowser and his family have been coming here each year for several years. When they first came Mrs. Bowser was so delicate that it was a grave question when they left Pennsylvania whether she would live to make the trip but she did, and those who saw her in Bedford a short time ago will bear me out in saying that she looked very well, as did her daughter, Mrs. Fred Joy, of Methuen, Mass.

At the lake one can get an electric car for almost any place and Dave says it is so much nicer to board such a car with a pocket full of passes to go anywhere he may select than it was to milk cows at Bedford Springs or hitch up and drive a two-horse wagon. His three single daughters are also there each summer with the family; one is leading trimmer in a large millinery store, another a tailor, and the other has charge of the mail order department of the great Boggs & Buhl store in Pittsburgh. Another family example of Bedford boys and girls.

I have been in and about the Hub for a week; get up at five and take a car for some nearby city and come back in the evening. It has been very hot here, 90 to 96 in the shade almost daily for some time. We have had some nice rains but they don't seem to cool the air much. I have done much of my traveling on electric cars and one can get the air and keep halfway cool on them. There are many points of interest about Boston. Nantasket Beach is very popular and is said to be the finest beach in the world. It is unexcelled for surf bathing and is five miles long. Nearby is a bath house of four hundred rooms, with all the modern conveniences. A grand promenade of four thousand feet in length, all covered, gives ample protection to all. All sorts of attractions can be seen here.

On the way down by boat from Boston one passes many points of interest, among them is Nix's Mate which is one of the most famous places in Boston Harbor. It is a pyramid thirty-two feet high and rests upon a shoal that at low tide shows plainly out of the water. There are two stories told about this island. One is that the mate of a captain by the name of Nix was executed on the spot for killing his master; the other is that Nix had been at one time connected with some piratical enterprise and his mate being caught was here doomed to death. In either case the mate protested his innocence and in proof thereof said that in a certain number of years the island would be entirely washed away. As to the guilt or innocence of the man of course no one knows, but it is positively certain that the once beautiful little island has quite passed from sight and the black object now on it is a fitting memorial. There are many other memorable objects that one sees en route to Nantasket by boat. One soon reaches the old, old town of Plymouth, where one has an opportunity to see and even bow very reverently and kiss the stone where the Pilgrims landed, and where many relics of Pilgrim history are to be seen.

Most all the electric railroads have a park at some nice and convenient place along their line and there they have amusements of all kinds. The free open-air circus is one of the big attractions at each one of these parks; they give three acts and change the bill each week. The first act generally goes on at three, and the best act at seven and there is not an idle minute for the visitor at any of these performances. Boston, like all other cities, has arranged a set of trolley trips around the city—fifty cents a ride—and one is shown very many points of interest, such as the old South church, the spot where the tea was thrown into Boston Harbor, Longfellow's home, the great elm under which Washington took charge of the army, the church in whose steeple Paul Revere hung the lanterns, Bunker Hill monument, the landing place of Lief Ericsson, and a host of other historic spots. The ride takes two hours and to any one not acquainted with the way to find all these places is very convenient. Dad did not take it; he has not had time, not even to go to Winthrop where he once lived and only five miles away. But I did take time last Saturday to go to Norumbega Park to see the two milk-white Arabian horses, King and Queen, dive. These horses, one at a time, go up an incline thirty feet high and then putting their front feet close together, much as a boy does his hands when about to jump off of the spring board, they dive into a pool of water some fifteen feet deep. Soon their heads will appear and they walk up an incline on to dry ground where two men go over them with a smooth piece of board and thus get much of the water from them, then they are blanketed and led to their stable. Now, mind you, no one goes up this incline with the horses but when they are led to the opening they trot up alone and first look to one side and then to the other as if bowing to the crowd, straighten themselves up and take the plunge. They play their part twice a day and are noted all over this country as well as Europe.

The public gardens of Boston look very pretty and are crowded with persons seeking shelter from the heat, which has been terrible thereabouts for ten days. One sees hundreds and perhaps thousands of men each day as he goes about and these are doing "nil," so that I think Bryan's remark "Shall the people rule?" very appropriate. I leave for the principal cities of Connecticut tomorrow.

Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

There's nothing so good for a sore throat as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Cures it in a few hours. Relieves any pain in any part.

The woodland silence one time stirred By the soft pathos of some passing bird,

The spot where once, unseen, a flower Has held its fragile chalice to the shower,

Is different forevermore.

Unheard, unseen,

A spell has been!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

If comforts and quilts are dried in a good stiff breeze they will be as light and fluffy as when new.

Whiting rubbed on with flannel will remove baking stains from discolored cups and dishes.

Keep a flat file in your kitchen drawer. It is the best thing in the world to sharpen bread, meat and chopping knives.

Here is a good use for left-over oatmeal: Make a batter as for bread, add the oatmeal and beat it well. Put in a little lively yeast, and let stand over night. Add a little salt and soda and bake on a pancake griddle. An egg or two is an improvement.

Chopped beef or pork cracklings are good to use in Indian bread, which is usually served warm, or they may be mixed with bread and mashed potato seasoned and fried like sausage.

Melted beef drippings or tallow can be used in the place of paraffine over the top of jelly. Be sure when cold to cover the space around the edge where it has shrunk away from the glass.

To make perpetual paste, dissolve half an ounce of alum in two teacupfuls of boiling water, beat in an equal weight of flour, add a few drops of oil of cloves and let boil. This will keep for months.

Put clothespins in a small basket that has a hook made of wire on the handle. Slip the hook over the line and push the basket along as you hang the clothes.

A good rule for a young housekeeper in cooking vegetables is that all vegetables that grow above the ground should be put on to cook in boiling water; all that grow below the ground, except new potatoes, in cold water.

The green tips of celery or minced leaves of Brussels sprouts may be substituted for parsley when that is not obtainable for garnishing.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS

Do Not Endanger Life When a Bedford Citizen Shows You the Cure

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Bedford testimony:

Mrs. H. A. Cook, living on Penn Street, Bedford, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family for a long time and have always given such good results that I believe I am warranted in recommending them. My brother-in-law was suffering very severely from an attack of kidney trouble, procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Irvine's drug store, and began their use. It took only a short use of this remedy to drive these attacks away. Doan's Kidney Pills always act quickly and never cause any inconvenience."

Telling Character by Eyes

If eyes are placed too close together the owner is jealous and critical.

If eyes are far apart the owner has a fine memory and broad intelligence. Deep-set eyes show melancholy and moodiness.

Wide open, round eyes mark a mind that is not developed, is credulous and serious about small gossip. The owners have no self-control.

If the eye is very oval, almost almond shape, with the outward droop shaped to a point, look out for a crafty and subtle nature.

Gray eyes are those of intellect and a well-balanced character. They show unselfishness and a strict sense of justice. When they are put below a broad, high forehead they denote great talent.

Brown eyes, with a touch of hazel, show courage, intelligence and affection.

When the hazel eye has an arched eyebrow it shows a fickle temper.

Velvety brown eyes show intense feeling and are not often to be trusted.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold A. S. Nusbbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Ed. D. Heckerman.

LEGEND OF THE THISTLE

Sacred to Thor—Typical of the Scotch.

The thistle, loved of the Scot, is once more brightening the countryside, spelling its lessons of sturdy integrity to all who are able to read. In the old days and in the northern countries the thistle was sacred to Thor, the god of the thunder. Its bright color was derived from his lightning and its blossom was supposed to protect any person or building placed under its guardianship. In the Latin countries it was devoted to Mars, the war god, and was regarded as a remedy for vertigo, jaundice, boils, bites of mad dogs and venomous beasts, and the other infirmities or disasters which were supposed to come from Mars.

It is related that in one of Charlemagne's campaigns a pestilence broke out in his army, killing off large numbers of his men. The emperor prayed to God for help and in response to his prayer an angel appeared and shot with a cross-bow, telling the emperor that the spot where it fell would be marked with a plant which would prove the best of all antidotes and stay the raging of the plague. Following the arrow Charlemagne found the thistle.

King Louis, reigning over France in the early part of the fourteenth century, established the Order of the Thistle, called also the Order of Bourbon, in honor of the Virgin. This was composed of 36 knights, who wore a belt emblazoned with the word "Esperance" and having a buckle of gold from which hung a tuft like that of the thistle.

But it is with the Scotch thistle is most closely identified. It is typical of the Scotch character, sturdy, self-reliant, self-respecting, defying insult and punishing all who would treat it with disrespect. To the Scot it is the symbol of protection, growing out of the time so far back in the history of men that no one remembers when or where it happened, it saved the country from defeat. The Danes had invaded the land under cover of darkness and were making their way silently over the rough country to the point of attack. Suddenly a common soldier stepped on a thistle and, crying out with the pain, gave the alarm to the Scots, who rushing forward, routed them with terrible slaughter. Since that time the thistle has been proudly carried on the banners of Scotland and graven on its arms with the motto: "Nemo me impune lacessit." (No one shall provoke me with impunity.)

This device of the Scotch monarchs was adopted by Queen Anne. Scotland established the order of the Thistle in 787, but it afterward became known as the order of St. Andrew. This claims to be the most ancient of all high orders.

The thistle acts as a kind of barometer, regularly closing before rain and can be seen fastened against cottages in France, Germany and Spain to indicate the state of the atmosphere.

How to Avoid Appendicitis

Most victims of appendicitis are those who are habitually constipated. Foley's Orino Laxative cures chronic constipation by stimulating the liver and bowels and restores the natural action of the bowels. Foley's Orino Laxative does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Rebus substitutes. Ed. D. Heckerman.

What a Prize Story Contest Reveals

The thousand dollar prize offered by The Bohemian Magazine for the best short stories has brought out the rather interesting fact that a knowledge of short story writing is surprisingly general. The editor of The Bohemian states that though hundreds of manuscripts have been received in competition for the prizes a remarkably small number in comparison with former contests held by the same magazine, are downright bad. Indeed the most of them evidence a good knowledge of English grammar and a fair understanding on the part of their writers of how a short story should be told. Twenty years ago, or even ten, this was not so.

The higher grade of excellence of the manuscripts in the present competition is accounted for, the editor of The Bohemian thinks, by the fact that the reading of stories has become the chief literary pursuit of Americans. Men and women who have read widely of fiction, long or short, and who also have had a life with experiences somewhat out of the ordinary are thus well equipped to tell their story directly and fairly well.

The Bohemian has already received several short stories by unknown writers of a striking order of merit and the editors are confidently expecting that a new record in the number of manuscripts received will be made when it becomes generally understood by the public that this competition is open for all writers, that the best story will win the prizes by whomsoever submitted.

The Service the Despised Sparrow Renders.

Let us see what a weed means to the farmer! A thousand per cent. is the increase Nature yields in corn; but the ordinary garden weed reproduces in a single season from a single plant one hundred thousand seeds, which in another year would yield a billion weed plants. Up at Indian Head in Northwest Canada, where—if any place on earth, frost should prove death to weeds—the government horticulturist found a tumbling mustard plant, which by actual count, produced a million-and-a-half seeds. Science may counsel spraying for weeds; but you can't spray out weeds that are carried to the four corners of earth by winds, and wing their way in all sorts of fairy parachutes like thistle and dandelion down. The only way to destroy such weeds is to destroy the seeds early in the game.

Now there is probably no bird regarded as more of a pest than the little sparrow. His ill-bred, loud-voiced clatter drives away song birds. He hangs round your barn and steals your grain, and he nests in the eaves of your poultry house and infests the cracks with that vermin pest of chick-on life—mites—and he proves a musky visitant on your house piazzas. Yet balance the little sparrow's account with what is to his credit. A scientist in Iowa by test after test found that in winter-time the sparrow ate about a quarter of an ounce of weed seed a day. Then he counted the number of sparrows ordinarily seen in winter to the square mile. He put the number at ten. I think that is away below the average. Try it yourself wherever you live; but on the basis of ten birds to the square mile, he figured that the sparrows must eat in the State of Iowa alone, eight hundred and seventy-five tons of weeds a winter. I would not like to have to figure out how many acres of good land those weeds would have assuredly contaminated.—From "The New Spirit of the Farm," by Agnes C. Laut, in The Outing Magazine for September.

Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For Aug. 30, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xxvi, 17-25. Memory Verse, 21.—Golden Text, Luke vi, 27.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

David is still fleeing for his life from Saul, for Saul sought him every day and said, "If he be in the land I will search him out throughout all the thousands of Judah." (xxiii, 14, 23), but God delivered him not into his hand. On one occasion Saul and his men compassed David and his men round about to take them, but just then a messenger came to Saul saying, "Haste thee and come, for the Philistines have invaded the land," so Saul returned from pursuing David (xxiii, 26, 27). After the parting of David and Jonathan, as recorded in last week's lesson, there followed that incident to which our Lord referred in Matt. xii, 3, when He said, "Have ye not read what David did when he was an hungered, and they that were with him?" These lessons were therefore a familiar portion to our Lord, as were all the Scriptures, which He loved to unfold to His disciples. That day at Nazareth the devil was on hand in the person of Doeg the Edomite, Saul's chief herdsman, and he became the murderer of eighty-five priests, besides other men and women and children, by the command of Saul (xxii, 18, 19). Abiathar, one of the priests, escaped and fled to David and told him the sad tale, leading David to feel that he was guilty of the death of all those people. It was then that David uttered those memorable words to Abiathar, "Abide thou with me; fear not, for he that seeketh my life seeketh thy life, but with me thou shalt be in safeguard" (xxii, 23).

When we think of the slaughter of these priests of the Lord, the massacre of the babes at Bethlehem and the martyrs in all ages, we are simply dumb, yet tempted to ask, Where is the love of God in all this? Then we remember that He said to His disciples, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul" (Matt. x, 28), and He has also taught us that "to die is gain," so that some day we shall see that all this work of the devil brought no real harm to these martyred ones, but only gain. We cannot see it now, but we can believe it, and believing is seeing—faith is the eye of the soul. The story of today's lesson does not tell us of the first time that David had Saul in his power. See in chapter xxiv how completely David had him and how easily he might have disposed of him, but he refrained, saying, "I will not put forth my hand against my lord, for he is the Lord's anointed" (xxiv, 10). He simply cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privily that he might afterward show him how he had him in his power and if possible make him ashamed of himself and of his folly. He succeeded for a time and in some measure, as we learn from Saul's words in the end of that chapter. But, as we said in a previous lesson, no reliance can be placed upon such a man possessed with such an evil spirit, and now he is again pursuing him with 3,000 chosen men (xxvi, 1, 2), and again God puts Saul in David's power and causes a deep sleep to come upon Saul and his men while David and Abishai (David's sister's son) came by night and took the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's bolster, and none of Saul's men saw it nor knew it nor awaked because of that deep sleep from the Lord. It must have been a sleep from the Lord which held the guard to whom Peter was chained that night of his deliverance by the angel (Acts xii, 6). When Abishai urged David to take advantage of his opportunity and let him smite Saul to the earth, promising that one thrust would do the work, David again refused to stretch forth his hand against the Lord's anointed, saying, "As the Lord liveth, the Lord shall smite him, or his day shall come to die, or he shall descend into battle and perish" (verse 10). He would leave his enemy wholly to God and keep his hands off. It is possible for us to commit our way and our works and all people and things so wholly to God and so leave them there that we can dwell in God and see Him only.

When David had put a good distance between Saul and himself he cried out to Abner, the captain of Saul's host, and told him what a valiant man he was and how well he had cared for his master. Saul recognized David's voice. David replied to him, asking if it was God or man who had so stirred him against him, comparing himself to a flea and a partridge, as he had formerly to a dead dog and a flea (verse 20; chapter xxiv, 14). Saul seemed penitent again, confessed that he had erred and played the fool and stoned and asked David to return, assuring him that he would no more do him harm. David asked him to send for his spear, reminded him again how he had spared his life and appealed to the Lord to render to every man His righteousness and faithfulness. Note David's habit of continually inquiring of the Lord (xxiii, 2, 4, 9-12) and see Prov. iii, 5, 6; in chapter xxv the death of Samuel, and the story of Abigail, good and beautiful, and her foolish, drunken husband. See her kind words of encouragement to David (verses 28-31) and note particularly these: "The soul of my Lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord thy God." Appropriate this to yourself.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John E. Fyfe, one of the Editorial Staff of The Eclectic Medical Review, says of Unicorn root (Helonias Divara) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues: "In Helonias we have a medicine which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhoea; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weak condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhoea (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an atonic condition of the digestive organs and the circulatory (blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is of great value." John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root: "In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal: "A valuable remedy in catarrhes, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhoea (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Fall Styles

Walking skirts are a bit longer this year, though some tailors claim that all skirts for this purpose should be ankle-length. In winter this safe clearance of the ground is certainly most convenient. The costume-skirt, on the other hand, must be long, else we shall sacrifice the grace of movement that is the main thought in the gown's entire scheme. If skirt lengths are greater, their width is less—draperies must be of the clinging, not the flowing, kind—but there is a certain graceful swing from waist-line to hem that must not be lost in any case. Crepe de chine, as might be expected, accommodates itself admirably to these styles, and Lansdowne and cashmere develop most satisfactorily. Tussah Royal is the name of a material, newly produced, that has the sheen of silk crepe and the wearing qualities of wool, to which is added a certain resilience that makes it practically uncrushable. Silk is taking on a new lease of life, soft and pliable weaves being the new order. Fancy, rather than plain, weaves are preferred, contrast being secured by the woven pattern. Borax for Oily Skin

The "summer is our discontent" is an amendment of Shakespeare made more frequently by the woman with the oily skin than by any of her sisters. For to this woman the hot air and the clammy air bring a result that is distressingly different from that pictured by the graceful flights of fiction.

In view of this fact it is strange that there does not exist among women a more general appreciation of borax as a means of preventing this excessive flow of oil. Borax, when used in small quantities, is not injurious to any skin, and it is absolutely necessary in overcoming the hardness of much of the water which is found at summer resorts. There is nothing more harmful to any skin than hard water, and for this reason the woman who starts on her summer outing should always take with her a box of powdered borax. When she arrives at her destination she should fill a bottle with water and add to this as much borax as the water will dissolve. In the case of a dry skin a little of this may be poured into the basin each time the face is washed. In that of a greasy skin the solution, full strength, may be wiped over the forehead and nose, after which it is washed immediately in clear water. The lower part of the face should never be washed in the solution full strength.

Attention, Asthma Sufferers!

Foley's Honey and Tar will give immediate relief to asthma sufferers and has cured many cases that had refused to yield to other treatment. Foley's Honey and Tar is the best remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung trouble. Contains no harmful drugs. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Origin of Honeymoon

Everyone uses the word honeymoon and few have ever taken the trouble to find out how the name was originated.

It has nothing to do with the supposition that it is a period of sweetness and love which is granted to every married couple by the world.

Instead of this it is called from an ancient practice of drinking the wine of honey for 30 days following the wedding ceremony.

USEFUL TO KNOW

Put tissue paper in baby's bottle with water and shake thoroughly. It will remove all particles and can be shaken out of bottle with ease. Rinse with saleratus and water and bottle will be perfectly sweet and clean.

The back porch should not be overlooked; make it as pleasant as you can for those who work around the kitchen.

The result will be more satisfactory if in cutting thin silk or a variety that trays it is placed between sheets of thin paper and the pattern cut through thin paper and silk together.

If one uses engraved paper for the first sheet of a letter, it is customary to use it for the entire letter. One should never use two kinds or appear to wish to use the engraved sheets sparingly.

To clean hairbrushes rub the brush with flour; when quite clean, remove all traces of flour with a dry towel. This method preserves the varnish on the wood and prevents the bristles from becoming soft.

A paste made of fine starch and a very little water spread on a bruised spot immediately after a blow will often prevent discoloration.

Water bottles which obstinately remain stained may be treated with a solution made of tea leaves, water, vinegar and a lump of salt. After this has stood for a couple of hours the bottle should be rinsed and left to drain, neck down.

Summer Colds

The summer cold is a nuisance, and one which is sometimes hard to get rid of in the usual way. Whenever you contract a summer cold, before resorting to drugs try this process: If able go out in the open air, breathe copiously and deeply and slowly for about twenty times, repeating every hour until cured. If unable to go out wrap yourself up in a blanket, even on the hottest kind of a day, open wide all the doors and windows, and then do just as directed above. Some persons, having had a summer cold for six weeks, have got rid of it by this process, and colds newly contracted have also been cured in this way. Therefore, everywhere try and cultivate full and frequent lung inflation by breathing clear out, clear in and low down—that is, make all your breathing as when taking a long breath. This will have a tendency to throw off the waste material at the pores and revitalize the blood, thus imparting much-wanted energy to the system.

A Boon to Elderly People

Most elderly people have some kidney or bladder disorder that is both painful and dangerous. Foley's Kidney Remedy has proven a boon to many elderly people as it stimulates the urinary organs, corrects irregularities and tones up the whole system. Commence taking Foley's Kidney Remedy at once and be vigorous. Ed. D. Heckerman.

IF YOU EXCHANGED

You Would See That Your Horse Fared Better.

What a startling change in the treatment of horses would quickly occur if men were used exactly as they treat their horses. In that case whips would be seldom used.

Jerking the bit would cease. Also yelling, cursing, pounding and kicking.

Check reins would be very slack. Blinders would be discarded. Clipping and docking would go "out of style."

Big loads would rarely be seen. Fast driving would be unpopular. Axle grease would have a boom. Better roads would be loudly demanded.

Wide tires would be numerous. Race tracks would be "For Sale." The demand for horse blankets would double.

Stables would be light, clean and well ventilated.

Horses would be watered frequently, fed regularly, have a variety and sufficiency of food and a deep, soft bed in an ample stall at night.

All of which proves how mean, cruel and ignorant mankind is likely to be.

Torturing eczema spreads its burning area every day. Doan's Ointment quickly stops its spreading, instantly relieves the itching, cures it permanently. At any drug store.

Sulphur Bleach for Fruit Stains

Stained table linen follows the return of the fresh-fruit season as surely "as night follows day." For removing such stains there is nothing more effective than the sulphur bleach. Lay a spoonful of sulphur on a plate, and sprinkle with a few drops of alcohol. Over this place a tin funnel with the point upward. Touch a lighted match to the alcohol; wet the stained linen, and hold the spot over the opening in the point of the funnel. The sulphur fumes will remove the most obstinate stain, seldom requiring more than one application. Rinse and wash the linen at once, to prevent rotting the material.

RECIPES

Tapioca Pudding—Boil one-half cupful of tapioca and one cupful of sugar in three cupfuls of hot water until clear. Remove from the fire and add the well-beaten whites of two eggs, a cupful of grated pineapple and the juice of half a lemon. Serve cold with cream. Half a pineapple will be sufficient. What is left may be used for the next day.

Apple Jam—To every pound tart apples, pared, cored and chopped, allow three-fourths pound sugar and the juice of finely cut yellow rind of a lemon. For each three pounds apples, add a heaping teaspoonful ginger. Stew together for an hour, stirring frequently with a wooden spoon, turn in pots or jars, cover carefully and keep in a cool, dry place.

Chili Sauce—Twelve medium-sized ripe tomatoes, one pepper finely chopped, one onion finely chopped, two cups vinegar, three tablespoonfuls sugar, one tablespoonful salt, two teaspoonfuls cloves, two teaspoonfuls cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls allspice, two teaspoonfuls grated nutmeg. Peel tomatoes and slice; put in a preserving kettle with remaining ingredients. Heat gradually to boiling point, and cook slowly two and one-half hours.

Pickled Peaches—Peel and weigh your fruit, and to every five pounds of it allow 2½ pounds of sugar, a pint of vinegar and spices—cloves, cinnamon and mace—to taste. Let the pickles lie in the sugar for an hour and then drain off the sirup which has flowed from them and put it over the fire with a half pint of water. As it boils the scum will rise and must be taken off. When the scum does not rise any longer put in the fruit. Boil for about five minutes, remove the peaches with a skimmer and spread on dishes. Put the spices and vinegar with the sirup and let it boil 15 minutes. Arrange your fruit in glass jars and pour the sirup over it. Pickled peaches may be put up by the same recipe.—The Delineator.

Beads

Beads are, perhaps, the oldest kind of ornaments in all countries of the world, and among savage races their value as a form of money is well known.

The beauties of ancient Rome were very much in favor of wearing amber beads, amber having been introduced after the expeditions of the Romans to Northern Europe.

Glass beads were first made by the Egyptians, and the Phoenicians who traded with Cornwall in far-off times brought glass beads to the British maidens, and when some of these ancient "barrows" were opened quantities of glass beads were found, as fresh in coloring as the day they were placed there with the corpse, says Home Notes.

Venetian beads are world famous on account of their marvelous hues and designs and, among the many attractions of Venice, the glass factories at Murano should be omitted by no visitor to the "Queen of the Adriatic."

Foley's Kidney Remedy will cure any case of kidney or bladder trouble that is not beyond the reach of medicine. No medicine can do more. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Go Easy on Eating

At this season of the year it is a mistake to overeat. Sunstrokes and discomfort, prickly heat and trying hot weather rashes are almost invariably traceable to the condition of the stomach.

We do not require as much food in summer as in other seasons, certainly not as strong food. Simplify the diet, also eliminate as far as possible rich and greasy foods.

Fruit that is absolutely fresh, and new vegetables are both health and beauty makers. Live on them chiefly, unless forbidden by some physical disorder.

Eat poultry rather than meat, and white meats and lamb rather than beef during very hot days. Never have meat oftener than once a day during the summer.

Don't wash down your food with ice water, and avoid too many soft drinks. If you use them take as little sugar as possible.

Cut out rich chocolate and whipped cream. Don't get the iced tea habit. Drinking buttermilk quenches thirst and at the same time cools the blood.

Call For Popular Subscriptions

In accordance with a suggestion from Mr. Bryan The Gazette solicits subscriptions in any amount, from $1 up, to the Democratic national campaign fund. In a statement on this subject Mr. Bryan said:
"I wish every Democratic paper would begin the collection of a fund from its subscribers. There are very few Democrats who could not afford to make a small contribution and the people will never be able to control the government until they take on themselves the burden of supplying campaign funds.
"So long as a few men furnish the money to finance a campaign the men will exert an undue influence upon the government.
"It seems that we have reached the end of corporate contributions, and this is a step in advance, but the individuals who control these favor-seeking corporations may still dominate politics by furnishing the sinews of war.
"The Democratic party has struck a blow at this system by limiting contributions to $10,000 and providing for publicity before election.
"The Republican party has so far refused to join with us on this proposition, but public sentiment may yet compel it to do so. I have no doubt that the Democratic party will receive contributions from more individuals than ever contributed to any campaign, and there is no reason why the entire sum necessary should not be supplied by contributions from the masses.
"If every Democratic paper will take the matter up and lend a helping hand we will soon have money enough in the treasury to provide for legitimate campaign work and that is all we want."
The Gazette is glad to assist in this work. Contributions sent us will be acknowledged and forwarded to the national committee.

Recognizing that I am indebted for my nomination to the rank and file of our party, and that my election must come, if it comes at all, from the unpurchased and unpurchasable suffrages of the American people, I promise, if intrusted with the responsibilities of this high office, to consecrate whatever ability I have to the one purpose of making this, in fact, a government in which the people rule—a government which will do justice to all, and offer to every one the highest possible stimulus to great and persistent effort, by assuring to each the enjoyment of his just share of the proceeds of his toil, no matter in what part of the vineyard he labors, or to what occupation, profession or calling he devotes himself.—From Bryan's Acceptance Speech.

One of our Blair County contemporaries predicts the re-election of John M. Reynolds to Congress, basing his argument upon Reynolds' supposed increase in popularity. The editor of the Register evidently has overlooked the fact that without a canvass John W. Blake of Blair secured one vote out of every four in this county at the recent primaries.

MR. KERN'S SPEECH

The following editorial from the Philadelphia Record of yesterday possesses intrinsic value and is willingly given space in this issue of The Gazette:

"Speaker Cannon probably had little idea of being an issue in the present national campaign unless he should chance to be nominated for President. He did not come anywhere near the Presidential nomination, but he is literally a living issue in the campaign. The Democratic party held him up before the country for condemnation and Mr. Kern's remarks in accepting the nomination for Vice President support with specifications the general charges of the platform.

"Of course 'Uncle Joe' is only partly responsible for the despotism he exercises. He is the principal member of a 'voting trust' which the Republicans of the House have created. The members have no right to abdicate their own functions and put the control of business into the hands of a Committee on Rules, at the head of which is the Speaker. The ultimate responsibility is upon them and the members of the party who keep them in Congress where they betray the trusts committed to them by transferring all their functions to the Speaker and the Committee on Rules. But the Speaker is responsible for accepting any such trust. He is a party—and a leading party—to an unconstitutional assignment of legislative powers, and Mr. Kern's speech points out in detail how the 'voting trust' created in the House by the Republicans works to defeat the rule of the people.

"Mr. Kern was not less effective in his references to the tariff arguments of the Republicans. They demand a perpetuation of Dingleyism as a condition of prosperity. But we have Dingleyism and we are not enjoying prosperity. Soup houses were opened in all our great industrial centres when the Republican party had been in complete possession of every branch of the Government for nearly a dozen years. The exposure of the Republican tariff humbug was never more incisively made than by Mr. Kern, who also showed strikingly the futility of the Republican pretenses to curb the injuriously powerful corporations. That these corporations are all for Taft and Sherman is beyond question, and this disposes of the Republican pretense of suppressing them."

ATTENTION, VOTERS!

A Matter That Should Not Be Forgotten.

Young men who voted on age last fall MUST be Registered or they can not vote under any circumstances. Others who have paid a State or County tax within two years may be able to swear in their votes, if they are not upon the Registry, but the voter who cast his first ballot in 1907 has no possible chances to do this. He is not upon any duplicate, has no tax assessed against him, and consequently cannot qualify to having paid a tax, as is necessary where voters are left off the Registry. By failing to register he practically and effectually disfranchises himself. There is no way by which he can vote, and Democrats should remember and see that every young Democrat who voted on age in 1907, is upon the polling list of 1908. And this must be seen to before the evening of September 2nd. Don't forget this.

A Correction

Riddlesburg, Pa., Aug. 22, 1908. Editor Bedford Gazette.

Dear Sir:—In regard to the article in your paper of August 21, we wish to state that the umpire whose rank decisions caused us to walk off the field at Saxton was not proposed by the Riddlesburg team but by Mgr. Joseph Benner of the Saxton team. In fact, both umpires were chosen by Mr. Benner. They did not have eleven hits off our pitcher; only five. Will Steele was the easiest this year. The score was 10-6 not 10-4. The teams are now signed up to play for a purse of $100 and a per centage of the gate receipts on the Bedford grounds, Saturday, September 5. The umpire is to be chosen by President Carpenter of the Tri-State League.
Sincerely yours,
Mgr. Riddlesburg B. B. C.

SOL METZGER A RANCHMAN

Well-Known Bedford Boy Interested in Fruit Growing.

Monday's Philadelphia Press contained a large cut of the fruit ranch in Idaho, now owned and looked after by Sol S. Metzger, a Bedford boy, who won distinction on the gridiron at the University of Pennsylvania as player and captain of the squad and who will direct the coaching of the team of his alma mater this fall. In the write up which accompanied the cut the Press said:

"There is no busier man in northern Idaho this summer than Sol Metzger, head coach of the University of Pennsylvania football team for the ensuing fall. Metzger is the owner of a 15-acre fruit ranch in the Lewiston-Clarkson Valley, and not only is he taking care of most of the work upon his land but he is at the same time giving more thought and study to the production and marketing of fruit than perhaps any other grower in this fertile section of the Pacific Northwest. Brouzed and rugged from exposure and hardened by the work he is doing upon his ranch, the former gridiron star is the picture of the proverbial rancher.
"Metzger went west last winter, and after spending some time in investigating the rich fruit belts of the Northwest, purchased a 15-acre apple orchard. He is learning the science and business of fruit growing by planting and bringing into bearing his own orchard."

Mr. Metzger and his elder brother, William, of St. Louis, are now guests of their mother, Mrs. Mary Metzger, South Richard Street.

Catching the "Tone."

He was a well meaning young man, but as curate in a small village he had never occasion to meet the class of people who frequented the fashionable parish to which he had just been appointed.

His new rectory, wishing to help him on to success, had been liberal with advice and had duly impressed him with the importance of always taking the "tone" of the people with whom he mingled.

Being invited to take dinner at the mansion of one of the members of the congregation and knowing that he would have to say grace, the young curate took his cue from the conversation overheard before dinner, and when his hostess nodded meaningly in his direction he delivered himself of the following, which he considered quite in keeping with the "tone" of the guests assembled.

"O Lord, thanks awfully, jolly good feed, wot?"—London Express.

The Miser's Carpet.

"Dr. Quain, the eminent physician, full of Hibernian wit, would sometimes tell unauthorized anecdotes of his professional experiences," says Sir Algonwyn West in "One City and Many Men." "Once he was attending a well known man of miserly habits in Mayfair, who when very ill asked him to honestly tell him if he would ever again rise from his bed of sickness. The doctor thought he never would. 'Please ring the bell,' said the patient, and when he had secured the attendance of his housekeeper he said: 'Have the strip of carpet by my bedside, which is a good one, wrapped up and put away. I shall not want it again, and if it is left here those undertaker's men will be sure to spoil it with their dirty boots!'"

A Man's Tact.

Nobody but Mr. Henley would have asked such a question in the first place. "Miss Fairley," he said, "if you could make yourself over what kind of hair and eyes would you have?" "If I could make myself over," said Miss Fairley, "I would look just exactly as I do now."

"You would!" exclaimed Henley in honest surprise, and to this day he can't understand why Miss Fairley thinks him a man of little taste, and less tact.

A Real Dilemma.

"Say, Mike," queried Plooding Pete, who was looking at the piece of a Sunday school paper that had come with a handout, "wot does it mean 'bout him' between de devil an' de deep sea?"

"It's de same as bein' told 't' take yer choice between golt' 't' work an' takin' a bath," explained Meandering Mike.—Chicago News.

A Friend in Need.

"Loan me a dollar, old man," said the actor. "I'm hungry."

"I'm broke myself," responded the stage manager, "but I'll put you on in the bill tonight. We have an eating scene."

"Man, I'll starve before night."

"In that case I'll call a rehearsal."—St. Louis Republic.

Music.

All music is more or less dramatic, and so the march of music is toward the theater. The times of mere enjoyment of tone combinations are past.—Herr Nikisch.

There is nothing more frightful than ignorance in action.—Goethe.

Marie de' Medici.

The tastes of Marie de' Medici, wife of Henry IV. of France, were splendid, and she indulged them to the full. One of her collars of venetian point was alone "worth the eyes out of a man's head," and she had a fine store of them. Describing her as she arrayed herself on a typical occasion in a costume of carnation satin, M. Batiffol, in "The French Court in the Seventeenth Century," continues as follows:

"This arranged to her satisfaction, her jewels, of which she has quantities scattered in different cabinets, must not be forgotten nor yet her ring. Her gold bracelets, studded with seventy-two small diamonds, were purchased from Francois le Prestre, jeweler of Paris, for 1,050 livres. Her earrings, two great diamonds surrounded by lesser brilliants, were made by the jeweler, Jean Subth. Her gold watch, valued at 2,100 livres, is oval in shape and ornamented with several diamonds, and she must not forget to place in her pocket for use at mass the 'rosary of enameled gold, embellished with diamonds,' a trifle worth 9,600 livres. And, thus adorned, the queen must yet perfume herself."

Clearing It Up.

"To which is a man more closely related," said the genealogist, "his first divorced wife's second husband or his present wife's first divorced husband?"

"So far as I can see, one tie is about as close as the other," said a thoughtful friend.

"So I should say," said the genealogist, "but Billy Bowen must have figured out a difference. Anyhow, when his first wife's second husband died Billy went to a ball game, but when his present wife's first husband died he went into mourning. I can't understand that."

"I can," said the thoughtful friend. "Billy's present wife was on the point of divorcing him so she could remarry her first husband. Now that he is dead she has decided to stick to Billy."

"Ah!" said the genealogist.—New York Press.

Always Waning.

A Frenchman who apparently has a good deal of time on his hands has been amusing himself by reckoning up the number of kisses he has given his wife during the first twenty years of his married life.

He finds that in the first year he dispensed about 100 kisses a day, or say, allowing for birthdays and legal and church holidays, about 36,700 in the year.

In the second year this number was reduced by half and in the third year to ten a day, while in the fifth year his better half had to be content with two a day, one in the morning and one in the evening.

What happened in the fifth year is "wrapped in mystery," but at the same rate of "progression" he probably arrived eventually at one kiss on the first of January every leap year.

Freedom of the Press.

The battle for a free press in the full modern sense was fought out between 1764 and 1771, beginning with the prosecution of Wilkes for attacking Bute in the North Briton and ending with the successful resistance to the proclamation by which the commons had forbidden the publication of their debates. Six printers who had infringed the proclamation were summoned to the bar of the house. Five obeyed, and the messenger of the house was sent to arrest the sixth. The lord mayor sent the messenger to prison. The house of commons sent the lord mayor to the Tower, but he was released at the next prorogation, and the day on which he left the Tower marked the end of the last attempt to silence the press.—New York American.

nopoly would be extirpated. He argued that the people would still need commodities under a license law, and that the disbanding of a trust would encourage the development of competing plants, lessen prices, thereby stimulate the original demand, and in consequence multiply industry, trade and labor.

Taking up Mr. Taft's charge that all this was Socialism, Mr. Bryan rejoined that the Republican party was the real encourager of Socialism, in going as far as it has in defense of monopoly by indorsing the trusts as a natural and necessary outgrowth of economical conditions, and by permitting the development of abuses against individualism. He points to the growth of the Socialist vote between 1900 and 1904 as evidence.

Peter Kline

Peter Kline, a well-known resident of Hopewell, died at his home there on Tuesday, August 18, at the age of 69 years and 13 days. He was born in that vicinity and at the outbreak of the Civil War joined the 152nd Regiment Penna. Volunteers. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Rebecca Stull, who left three children: Mrs. Martha Gates of Roaring Spring, and William and Nicholas, of Hopewell; he later married Miss Jennie Rohrer who, with four children, survives: Peter and Minnie, at home; Mrs. Fannie Bykens and Mrs. Bessie Rhea, of Hopewell.

The funeral took place at the late home of deceased on August 20, Rev. J. W. Glover conducting the services.

Girdles

The Directorate belts, made of soft silk and trimmed with silk, gold or silver tassels and braid, are among the latest novelties from Paris. Also girdles made of three pieces of inch and a half wide embroidered ribbon, fastened to a covered bone back and front with cut steel buckles. This is rather a survival of a style that was used a few years ago. When worn with the Directorate gown a soft silk sash may be attached to the sides and tied in a knot at the left side.

Laying Pipe Line

Preparatory to laying large oil pipes along the route surveyed through Morrison's Cove and Bedford County last winter by the National Transit Company, large shipments of iron tubes have been recently sent to several stations along the route. The line, as surveyed by the company last winter, will run past Ore Hill through the northern section of Bedford County and will enter Morrison's Cove at McKee Gap. Passing near Roaring Spring it will proceed on a straight line through Morrison's Cove, about one-half mile from Martinsburg, and be taken east toward Tussey mountain. It is expected that a large force of laborers will be given work along the line and as the greater number of the workmen will be hired in the section traversed by the line, it will likely prove a bonanza for the men of that section who are out of employment.

Literary Notes

Detective stories are by no means uncommon, but a detective story as good as the complete novel in the September Lippincott's is, and all who care for this type of fiction would do well to get a copy. The tale is entitled "The Investigation at Holman Square," and the author is Nevil Monroe Hopkins, who has already made quite a name for himself in this field. Mr. Hopkins combines great powers of invention with a knack of telling a story straightforwardly and without circumlocution, yet in a way which doesn't permit the interest to lag for a minute. The story opens with the finding of a love letter on a New York street by a young electrician, who advertises it, and thereby starts a series of startling events. The reader will find himself completely baffled as to the real perpetrator of the murder in Holman Square, just as were the police in the story—until the private detective, Mason Brant, unraveled the mystery. The author has made good use of his own expert knowledge of electrical subjects in working out the plot.

Nature-lovers will be deeply interested in Jennie Brooks's story of a real owl, "Socrates," in this number. The author, who has several successful books to her credit, is plainly a lover of our feathered friends, and she succeeds in imparting some of her own enthusiasm to the reader.

Anne Hollingsworth Wharton, author of "Italian Days and Ways" and other charming books of travel, contributes a delightful sketch entitled "Zephine in Warwickshire." Any one who has ever been over this historic ground, or who ever expects to go, will do well to read Mrs. Wharton's paper.

Facts About Personal Registration
Residents of cities of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd classes must personally register or they cannot vote at all. There is no way by which they can get upon the Registry only by personal application on the following dates:

In cities of the 1st and 2nd classes—Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Allegheny and Scranton—if they have no tax receipts they must register on the 3rd of September, or lose their votes. If they have a tax receipt, for tax paid within two years, they can register on the 3rd or 15th of September or on the 3rd day of October.

In cities of the 3rd class—where means all other cities within the state—if they have no tax receipt they must register on September 1st. If they have a tax receipt dated within two years they can register either on the 1st or the 15th of September or on the 17th of October.

If Your Eyes Are Blue

If your eyes are china-doll tints, or of that nondescript tone, half gray, half green, then by all means choose a frock or ribbon garniture of Copenhagen or porcelain blue.

This particular shade will deepen the tone of pale blue eyes two tones and transform the nondescript ones into quite a blueness.

Don't, however, if your eyes are the blue that goes with red hair, indulge in blue gowns. It will make you washed out and characterless. Few mothers realize this, hence their ruddy tressed daughters, until they arrive at years of a color sense for themselves, go clad in blue for tradition's sake with never a thought to looks.

Silk Drop Skirts

Silk drop skirts of two shades of silk—the lighter for the foundation and embroidered and trimmed in the darker shades—are very beautiful and are used almost entirely for the new fall frocks and gowns. There is also a variety of stripes.

Cantaloupe growers in portions of southern California report serious damage to this year's crop as a result of the devastation of the cantaloupe lice, which have killed all the vines in certain sections.

In times of drought the work of watering the garden can often be most easily done by frequent and thorough cultivations or hoeings. This keeps the surface mellow, with the result that moisture in ample quantities is pumped up from the subsoil and made available for the thirsty plants.

In a recent installment of these notes tansy was recommended as considered effective by some in driving ants from the food cupboards. While this may be true of the smaller black and red ants, it is not so of the large black variety which still raid the sugar box, feeding on the sugar by day and roosting on the tansy at night.

It is a fair assumption that if the man enjoys and is refreshed by a drink of cool water in haying time and harvest his horses, which usually work as hard as he, take about the same view of the matter. The careful driver will see that they get a sip of water once or twice between feeds during the hot days. They will enjoy the water and work the better for it.

An even more toothsome dish than the fine peas and string beans from the family garden are the green lima beans when one has the good fortune to raise them. Only a small per cent of the seed planted germinates and grows, and this tends to discourage one in raising them. But where plenty of seed is planted, the bushes given thorough hoeing and the weather being warm and favorable one will get enough of the big green pods to more than pay for the trouble.

Reports from the whole country show that the condition of the apple crop on July 1 was 57.6 per cent as compared with 66 per cent on June 1 and 44 per cent on July 1, 1907, and 62.3 per cent, the ten year average for July 1. This would seem to indicate that, while this year's crop is 13.6 per cent better than it was last year, it is nevertheless far enough below the average so as to insure a good price for all good fruit. It will be well for the apple grower to keep the crop situation in mind when closing deals for the sale of his apples this fall.

The laws in a number of states requiring the cutting of weeds along the roadsides by the abutting property owners or road supervisors specify July 15 and Aug. 15 as the interval in which this work should be done. This is probably better than no regulation at all, simply from the standpoint of the looks of the road, but it is a defective statute in that the seeds of most weeds and grasses are mature by the 1st of August. Better results would be secured were cuttings required June 15 and Sept. 15, at which times most weeds would be laid low just as they were ready to head out.

Mrs. H. M. King of Texas is said to be the largest landowner of her sex in the United States, her holdings reaching the enormous total of 1,470,000 acres. She has a magnificent ranch home in Kingsville, Tex. Most of her land is valued at from $15 to $20 per acre, her total wealth, including land, live stock and other property, being placed at $30,000,000. While Mrs. King inherited a large part of her property from her husband, she has more than doubled it through shrewd management and investment. Great numbers of live stock are raised on this farm, and agricultural operations are carried on on an extensive scale.

People often wonder, particularly those who have traveled for hundreds of miles through the corn belt, what becomes of the enormous amount of corn which is grown every year. The Crop Reporter for June seeks to answer this query. Some of the statistics presented are of interest. In the year 1890, when the total crop was 2,633,000,000 bushels, 241,000,000 bushels were consumed in flour and grist-mill products, 8,000,000 bushels in the manufacture of starch, 9,000,000 for malt liquors, 17,000,000 bushels in the production of distilled liquors, 40,000,000 for glucose, 100,000,000 for export and 13,000,000 for seed, making a total of 518,000,000 bushels, or 19.3 per cent of the entire crop. The remaining 80.7 per cent, or 2,115,000,000 bushels, seems to have been used almost entirely for feeding purposes. It is an interesting fact that about 80 per cent of the corn crop grown, roughly the above amount, was shipped out of the counties in which it was grown.

The St. Petersburg Academy of Science has recently dispatched an expedition into a district in northern Siberia for the purpose of excavating the remains of a mammoth which has been discovered 200 miles from the village of Kasachia. The head and a part of one leg were exposed through the action of the water, and the foxes had begun to eat the flesh found adhering to the bones. The remains of the mammoth are to be transported over the first stages of the journey by fifty sleighs drawn by reindeer. Russian scientists are much interested in the find, because the specimen now on exhibition in the museum at St. Petersburg is believed not to have reached an age of more than twenty-five years. These mammoths are thought to have lived about 100,000 years ago. The remains of the first specimen discovered were in such a state of preservation that after being thawed, salted and cooked portions of the flesh were actually eaten out of curiosity by some of the Russian scientists.

ALONE.

MISS you, my darling, my darling. The embers burn low on the hearth. And still is the stir of the household. And hushed is the voice of its mirth. The wind splashes fast on the terrace. The wind past the lattices moan. The midnight chimes out from the minster.

And I am alone.

I call you, my darling, my darling. I am tired with care and with fret. I would nestle in silence, beside you. And all but your presence I forget In the hush of the happiness given To those who through trusting have grown. To the fullness of love in contentment, But I am alone.

I call you, my darling, my darling. My voice echoes back on my heart. I stretch my arms to you in longing. And, lo, they fall empty apart. I whisper the sweet words you have taught me. The words that we only have known, Till the blank of the dumb air is better, For I am alone.

I need you, my darling, my darling. With its yearning my very heart aches. The load that divides us weighs harder. I shrink from the jar that it makes. Old sorrows rise up to beset me. Old doubts make my spirit their own. Oh, come through the darkness and save me. For I am alone.

—Robert J. Burdette.

THE INTRUDER.

HE is so little to be so loved! He came unbooted, ungarded, ungloved, Naked and shameless, Beggared and blameless. And, for all he could tell us, even nameless. Yet every one in the house bows down As if the mendicant wore a crown.

HE is so little to be so loved! Oh, I own I should be wondrous proud If I had a tongue All swiveled and swung With a double back action, twin screw lung. Which brought me victual and keep and Whenever I shook the surrounding air.

HE is so little to be so large! Why, a train of cars or a whale-back barge Couldn't carry the freight Of the monstrous weight Of all his qualities good and great. And, although one view is as good as another, Don't take my word for it. Ask his mother.

—Edmund Vance Cooke.

Resting Their Muscles.

When a man is tired he stretches his arms and legs and yawns. Birds and animals, so far as possible, follow his example. Birds spread their feathers and also yawn, or gape. Fowls often do this. Fish yawn. They open their mouths slowly until they are round, the bones of the head seem to loosen and the gills open.

Dogs are inveterate yawners and stretchers, but seldom sneeze unless they have a cold. Cats are always stretching their bodies, legs and claws, as every one knows who has had a cat for a pet.

Horses stretch violently when and after indulging in a roll, but not as a rule on all fours, as stags do. A stag when stretching sticks out his head, stretches his fore feet out and hollows his back and neck as though trying to creep under a bar.

Most ruminant animals stretch when they rise up after lying down. Deer do it regularly; so do cattle. This fact is so well known that if a cow when arising from lying down does not stretch herself it is a sign she is ill. The reason for this is plain—the stretch moves every muscle of the body, and if there is an injury anywhere it hurts.

Coffee in Jamaica.

You see all those bushes with red berries strung among their branches? That is coffee, and the taller trees among which it is growing are pimentos, from which the world gets its allspice. It looks like jungle, does it not? Yet many thousands of dollars would not buy that one hill slope. Among the lovely flowers humming birds sparkle as they fly and hover; butterflies as large as the birds dispute the honey with them. As you turn round the corner you surprise parties of tiny ground doves, and every now and again the larger pea doves sit across the road. Up from the valley below the sound of voices and laughter. Stop your carriage and look down. Those are the works on a coffee estate, and those flat terraces partitioned off into squares are the "barbecues" upon which the berries are dried. You can see that some of the squares are a different color to the rest. The dark ones are those that are covered with coffee; the others are those which have not yet been filled. Exchange.

Bees and Their Baskets.

Every bee carries his market basket around his hind legs. Any one examining the body of a bee through a microscope will observe that on the hind legs of the creature there is a fringe of stiff hairs on the surface, the hairs approaching each other at the tips, so as to form a sort of cage. This is the bee's basket, and into it, after a successful journey, he will cram enough pollen to last him for two or three days.

Gray and the Elegy.

Thomas Gray kept the elegy by him for nine years before he gave it to the world. He polished away at it all those years as a lapidary polishes a gem, and the result was he made it a gem. In his whole life he wrote comparatively little, and when asked why he had written so little he replied, "Because of the exertion it costs in the labor of composition."

Diverting Attention.

"So you favor the suit of that foreigner?" "Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I think I should rather like to have a man in the family whose English mother and the girls can criticize instead of mine."—Washington Star.

PRACTICAL SHIRT WAIST COSTUME.

SHIRT waist suits of a pin striped linen in black and white or colors and made with the long sleeves in regular tailored style are very smart for morning or general wear. The costume illustrated is particularly neat and attractive and is so cut that it is as suitable for wash materials as for silk or woolen goods. The collar and cuffs of the waist as well as the irregular band on the bottom of the skirt would be pretty of a plain material the color of the stripe. Checks and plain materials are equally dainty and can be made of all one material or trimmed with a contrasting color.

This suit is also practical for a linen costume. The five gored skirt is in round length, with a pretty flare at the bottom, and can be made perfectly plain or with the irregular band. This offers opportunity for using a pretty zig-zag soutache braid between the points, and it would add much to its appearance. The collar to the waist would be pretty in Dutch style or in the ordinary turnover and worn with a four-in-hand.

Another pretty material that would develop attractively in this style is the bordered lawn. A natural linen colored lawn with large brown polka dots and the border in walls of Troy design in brown would make a very neat afternoon costume. The border should be used at the bottom of the skirt. For the front plait, collar and cuffs the border could also be used.

A dressier type of gown can be made after this model if the skirt is made of plain linen and the waist of all over Hawaiian embroidery dyed the same color as the linen. Skirts and waists of the same color, but of a different material, seem to be a fad of the season. Blues, grays, browns and tans are the favored colors.

The pattern for this shirt waist is cut in seven sizes—from 32 to 44 inches bust measure. To copy it for the average person it requires 3 3/4 yards of material 27 inches wide or 2 3/4 yards 36 inches wide. The pattern for this skirt is cut in six sizes—from 22 to 32 inches waist measure. To copy it for the average person it requires 8 3/4 yards of material 27 inches wide or 7 1/2 yards 36 inches wide.

Any reader of this paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office for each pattern. Give the numbers, 4047 for the waist and 4160 for the skirt, and write the full address plainly. The patterns will be forwarded promptly by mail.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

..The.. Jade God

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1908, by Clarissa Mackie.

WHEN the good ship Tartary, bound from San Francisco to Shanghai, lay to at the mouth of the Whangpo river, Winston leaned eagerly over the rail as the landing tug made fast to the steamer and the stream of waiting passengers poured over the gangplank. Each one came under his careful scrutiny, and as the last one passed over he left his position and hurried on to the little tug, which was preparing to cast off.

There was an expression of relief on Winston's face as he boarded the crowded boat, and it grew in satisfaction as they cast off and proceeded up the muddy little tidal river toward the city. He stood alone among the passengers, a silent, rather moody figure, clad in light tweed, with a cap pulled low over his forehead. He did not have an acquaintance on board, and the long voyage across the Pacific had been unbroken by any friendship made or acquaintance formed.

Puffing, snorting, luggage tugs rushed past them to relieve the Tartary of her burden. Awkward junks, with clumsy sails, wrestling against the strong tide, wallowed in their wake. The darting sampans, speedy launches and cormorant fishers all formed part of a scene that was familiar enough to Winston, and he watched it with lack-luster eyes.

At last they were ashore, and Winston had emerged upon the Bund with a feeling of intense relief. He jumped into a waiting carriage and was driven immediately along the beautiful boulevard toward the old native city of Shanghai. He passed through the American, English and French concessions, and as they paused for an instant before the city gate ere they entered its dark arch he signaled to the driver and alighted.

"I will walk," he said curtly.

With that remark he disappeared within the gate and hastened rapidly down a dark and narrow street, paved with broken stones and filthy beyond description. With the directness of one who treads a familiar path he threaded the narrow streets, pushing his way through the throngs of blue bloused Chinese that blocked traffic at every corner. They swarmed in and out of the tiny shops, and in the bazaars the din of their staccato voices was deafening. Through it all Winston walked with unseeing eyes and unheeding ears.

At last he paused before a tiny shop tucked away in a maze of others, glanced furtively around and then bent his tall head and entered. A large Chinese emerged from a curtained interior and turned a bland, unsmiling countenance and dull little eyes toward him.

"Where is it?" demanded Winston roughly in English.

The man made no response. He merely stared impassively into the face of the American.

"Where is it?" repeated Winston, this time savagely. He thrust a hand into his pocket and drew a small, shining revolver. The weapon fell into his hand easily, and his long brown fingers closed about it as he raised it toward the Chinese.

The man uttered a frightened squeal and dodged into the back room, with Winston close upon his heels. He crouched in a corner and fumbled at a box.

"Get up!" commanded Winston sternly. "Get up and answer my question!"

Slowly the man arose, and this time the impassivity of his face was broken by an ugly grin that distended his wide mouth from ear to ear. "I don't know where it is," he replied in English, thrusting his yellow, clawlike hands into the sleeves of his blouse and staring impudently into Winston's face.

Winston sat down on a stool and coolly leveled the revolver at the man. "I'll give you two minutes," he said grimly. "Now hunt till you find it!"

The man did not stir as he stood there. The American slowly counted the seconds that made the first minute. When he began on the second minute the wide grin slowly changed to an expression of cowardly fear, and Winston counted fifty seconds the man darted down into the corner where he had crouched before and extended an object toward the American. Winston smiled joyfully, for the first time since he left San Francisco. The expression of care that had clouded his face lifted, and he threw back his stooping shoulders with a breath of relief.

The object which the Chinese extended toward him was a small image of the god of content. It was carved from dull green jade, and portions of its oily surface were worn smooth, as if by much handling. There was hatred in the eyes of the Chinese as he gave the image into Winston's hands. "How much this time?" asked Winston quietly as he thrust the weapon into one pocket of his coat and the green god into another.

The man sullenly named a price, which Winston paid without comment. Then he turned to go. "I've bought this from you three times already, Yung. Each time your agents in America have stolen it from me, and I have made a journey here to recover it. This is the last time, remember!" Then he left the Chinese standing among his shelves of curios, a strange smile creasing his yellow countenance. Winston then made his way leisurely back to the city gate, knowing that he was followed by several lithe, dodging figures. He kept furtive watch, however, and at last passed through the gate unmolested and entered the carriage which had waited for him. During the ride he sat with folded arms and thoughtful brow. Once he took the green god out of his pocket and surveyed it lovingly.

Jack Winston had come into possession of the green god some four years before the occurrence of the events related above. He had returned from a stroll through the bazaars of the old city, and as he entered the cool veranda of his bungalow he felt in his pocket for his matchbox. He had drawn forth the green god. Where it came from, how it got there, he never knew. He had found it there after his return from the bazaar, and as he looked at it curiously, examining the delicate carving of the hideous face, he experienced a feeling of rare exultation in its possession. He could not tell why he rejoiced at the discovery of the god in his pocket, but he was jealously careful that no one should know that he possessed it. He carried it hidden away in an inner pocket of his vest, and the small flat object pressing against his breast imparted a feeling of utter satisfaction with himself and the world. Then he returned to America, and the first day he was in San Francisco he had lost it. It had disappeared from the curio cabinet in his study, and the loss of it fell upon him like a blow. He could not have told what fascination it held for him. He only knew that he wanted it above all other things and that he would move heaven and earth, if possible, to recover it.

I will not relate what means he employed to trace the theft of the green god. It is sufficient to say that he traced it across the Pacific to Shanghai, followed it to the old city, down to that little curio shop of Yung's, and finally bought it back at an absurd price. He could not prosecute the thieves, for they were unknown to him, and the impassive Yung was silent regarding the manner in which it had come into his possession. Winston felt a strange reluctance to admit his possession of the god, and so he returned to America with the god securely concealed in his belt. There it had remained for six months, and then one day it disappeared again.

Drawn as by a magnet across the ocean to that little shop in old Shanghai again, Winston dropped his business and again trailed the image to the hands of Yung, paying an exorbitant price for it, only to return to America and lose it a third time.

For the third time he had recovered his treasure, and now he hugged it lovingly to his breast and gloated over it with the eye of a lover. The dull green stone seemed to glow with life as he looked. A thousand glints of light sprang from the carving. He was still staring at it when the carriage drew up before the Shanghai club. He thrust the image into his pocket and ran up the steps and straight into the arms of Miller.

"Winston, by all that's good to look upon!" exclaimed the latter heartily as he wrung the hands of the tall American. "What the devil is the matter face. He lifted his eyes with a cunning gleam at Winston, and the ferocity of the other man's glance startled him to sudden gravity. "Come, Winston!" he shouted hoarsely. "Come with me, man!" He turned and dashed through the door and into the street, closely followed by Winston.

Straight toward the river he hurried, Winston at his heels, a curiously eager light in his eyes and one hand grasping the revolver in his coat pocket.

Then they reached the Bund, and Miller turned. "Come on, Winston!" he cried again breathlessly, and together they strode to the end of the long public wharf.

"What is it, you scoundrel? Give me my god!" shouted Winston amid the clatter of traffic and the chatter of cool voices about them.

Miller's long arm shot upward, jerked back and then forward, and the jade god described a parabola in the air and splashed dully into the muddy waters of the Whangpo. As the circles widened and disappeared in the flowing current Miller turned to Winston and thrust out his hand.

"Forgive me, Jack," he said in a tone broken with emotion. "I did it for both of us. It would have ruined us both in the end."

other trips, during which you came and went silently, unobtrusively, and never once came to renew old friendships."

Winston hung his head, and a certain obstinate line deepened about his mouth. Still he made no response.

"What is it, Jack?" Winston paled at the emotion expressed in Miller's voice. He and Bob Miller had been chums until—what and come between them? He tried to recollect that he had not thought of old friends since—why, since the green god had come into his possession the first time!

He drew out a handkerchief and lifted it to his perspiring brow. As he did so the little green god fell rattling upon the polished floor.

"Great Jove!" Miller had darted down and picked up the image. He thrust it behind him, clinched in his hand, and backed away from the infuriated face of Winston.

"WINSTON, BY ALL THAT'S GOOD TO LOOK UPON!"

"Hold on there, old man!" he cried, throwing out a restraining hand. "You can have it back when I get through saying what I've got to say! You can have it if you want it!"

"I do want it," returned Winston doggedly.

"Wait. Sit down again." Miller waited until his friend had resumed his chair, and then he sat down opposite, surveying him with gravely anxious eyes. The green god was clasped in his hands. "Until four years ago I was the owner of the jade god," he said slowly.

"You!" Winston ejaculated.

"Yes, I. I found it among my possessions in a most mysterious manner, and from that moment I had no peace of mind. It disappeared almost immediately afterward, and I trailed it feverishly, madly, until I found it, paid a price and took it home, only to lose it again later on and to recover it in the same manner. I can't tell why I wanted it. I am not a collector of curios, but so long as I had possession of it I was content. When I lost it I was almost murderous in my desire to recover it. The prices I paid for the jade god nearly ruined me. You helped me out many a time, Jack, when I had lost it, and then one day I woke up, or some one woke me up."

"How?" asked Winston hoarsely. "Told me the story. It's an old trick with Yung. The image certainly possesses some magnetic power that influences the owner to recover it at all hazards when lost. Yung smuggles it into the pocket of a gullible foreign devil, such as you and I are. We find it, yield to its fascination. Yung's agents steal it. We start in hot haste after it. Jealous lest some other should possess it, we pay a blackmailing price for it and lose it again, and so it goes on indefinitely until there is no more money to pay with, and then we lose it for the last time. That's what happened to me. You remember Jackson?"

Winston nodded. "Shot himself when his money gave out and couldn't get the god back again. I've lost all taste for the thing now. It can't fascinate me." Miller looked down at the jade image carelessly. Then his gaze became fixed, and a covetous smile spread over his face. He lifted his eyes with a cunning gleam at Winston, and the ferocity of the other man's glance startled him to sudden gravity.

"FORGIVE ME, JACK. I DID IT FOR BOTH OF US."

"Come, Winston!" he shouted hoarsely. "Come with me, man!" He turned and dashed through the door and into the street, closely followed by Winston.

Straight toward the river he hurried, Winston at his heels, a curiously eager light in his eyes and one hand grasping the revolver in his coat pocket.

Then they reached the Bund, and Miller turned. "Come on, Winston!" he cried again breathlessly, and together they strode to the end of the long public wharf.

"What is it, you scoundrel? Give me my god!" shouted Winston amid the clatter of traffic and the chatter of cool voices about them.

Miller's long arm shot upward, jerked back and then forward, and the jade god described a parabola in the air and splashed dully into the muddy waters of the Whangpo. As the circles widened and disappeared in the flowing current Miller turned to Winston and thrust out his hand.

"Forgive me, Jack," he said in a tone broken with emotion. "I did it for both of us. It would have ruined us both in the end."

Winston's gaze had been riveted on the spot where the jade god had disappeared. Now he turned his eyes to Miller's, and there was a certain light of understanding in them. He smiled ruefully and took the proffered hand. "I believe—I believe I am very glad," he said.

Woman Beat Two Men
We suspect you'd like the tale, how a woman beat two hardware dealers in Girard, Pa.

Devoe salesman tried his best to get those men to sell Devoe lead-and-zinc in that bright town; and failed. Reluctantly took Mrs. E. R. Bowman, druggist.

They said they couldn't sell paint for more than $1.25 a gallon. Mrs. Bowman can. She has sold about all the paint, that has been sold there since.

She knew Devoe; had sold his artists' materials. Had some sense and force, besides; she easily learned that cheap is dear in paint, and told the people.

Mr. Burt Young bought a gallon Devoe for rooms that had always taken a gallon of other paint; had half left.

Mr. John Hanna, grocer, thought it expensive before he bought it; brought back nearly half of his paint, and said it was the cheapest job he ever had.

Mrs. Bowman reports universal satisfaction. So much for a cheap-paint town with a bright woman in it.

Notices relative to the change in the postage rate, applicable to letters mailed in this country and addressed to any office in Great Britain or Ireland, have been sent out by the Postmaster General. The order reads:

"It is hereby ordered that, commencing on the first day of October, 1908, the postage rate applicable to letters mailed in the United States, addressed for delivery at any place in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall be two (2) cents an ounce or the traction of an ounce. Letters unpaid or short paid shall be dispatched to destination, but double the deficient postage, calculated at said rate, shall be collected of the addressee upon the delivery of the unpaid or short paid letters." This order affects only letters. The rate on newspapers will remain the same as before.

Must Pay Per Capita Tax

Last week we published the decision of Judge Walling of Erie County, to the effect that non-residents are not liable to pay the per capita or poll tax of one dollar usually assessed for road purposes. This is but the decision of a judge. The Attorney General has decided that the dollar must be paid, and his decision must stand until the Superior or Supreme Court of the state rules otherwise. Pay your dollar and save trouble, unless you wish to carry the matter to the higher courts.

A large number of young people go away to school each year. To those who are considering the question of a school, we desire to call their attention to the Lock Haven State Normal School. Only a Few Days Until School Begins

We wish to call the attention of mothers to the elegant line of Dress Materials. This week we received a splendid assortment of Fall Styles in Dress Gingham, Percales and Serges—10 to 25c yd.

We are showing two numbers in Children's Stockings at 15c a pair, which are very special—one a medium, and the other a heavy weight. These stockings have always sold at 20 to 25c a pair. In order to get them to sell at this price, we had to take one hundred dozens for spot cash. We will be pleased to show you these when in the store. We are positive we can save you five cents or more a pair.

Children's Handkerchiefs—dainty, and neat little stripes and figures at 5, 8 and 10c. Also plain ones at same prices.

School Shoes. This department is especially strong just now in this line. We show elegant, strong and good wearing little shoes made up in tough kid and calf at $1 and $1.25. If you want the very best shoes made—buy the Budd's Shoes; they cost you a little more than some other makes, but they'll last twice as long.

Bedford County Fair

We hear so much about the Fair this summer that we know it's going to be a Cracker-Jack. Being under a new management this year, every one is doing his best to make it a great big success. Make out a list NOW of what you will be able to take, and work on these items so that you may win the prize. Remember, the premiums won't be little, measly ones, as in former years. A whole week of pleasure is provided, and we know you won't be disappointed.

During this Fair Week we are going to make prices so attractive that you will be glad to spend a portion of your time in this big store. We will have many attractive articles on display not seen at the Big Fair.

A Display of Good Taste

is manifested by every woman who uses Eaton, Crane & Pike's for her correspondence. No matter how exacting the occasion, this beautiful fabric finished stationery will be appropriate.

A letter that is worth writing at all is worth writing on good paper. Let that paper be Highland Linen, and the letter will be doubly acceptable to its recipient.

We sell Highland Linen for 25c a box.

Take a couple packages along to the boarding school.
